

He is God's Angel

Today, we travel on our way home with the sadness in our hearts.
Yesterday was the day we lost some one that was very dear to us.
We love him, we will greatly miss him, and we will never forget him.
We have his memories we express through words, smiles, tears, and laughter.

The memories are now stained to our thoughts, because those are what we cherish the most.

We have him on our mind, because we think about the "what if's", the "should have's", and the "could have's".

But we can not let regrets bury us in sadness, we were very blessed to have him as a son, uncle, brother, grandson, a significant other, and a friend.

We will look back and say, "Remember when we did this" and you smile because its something we shared with Arnold.

Although the sadness will come after the memories, but our loved one is in a beautiful place, a paradise you can say.

He is another one of God's angels, pray to him because he is now our guardian angel, and will be there whenever you need him.

He will know when you need him the most.

Cry only for a little while longer, because he does not want us to hurt any longer.

He sits in the sky looking down on all of us, always remember;

He is there to listen to you, but you can not hear him.

Guiding and helping you, standing by your side, but cannot see him.

The love in our hearts will always be as strong as he is.

Never say goodbye because as Native People, we don't believe in good-byes, we will soon see them, it may take a lifetime but that's a lifetime to make him proud as he watches over us.

Over come challenges that will make him say, "That's my family". We will continue to love you, miss you, and treasure memories.
