

I am sad tonight and grieving
And my heart's like molten lead,
For one I love so dearly
Now is numbered with the dead.
But why thou selfish mortal
Stay thy pangs of bitter pain,
When his earthly struggles ended
A saint the heavens gained.
So God, grant me that wisdom
To feel joy instead of grief,
Then to share that joy unending
Is the spirit he'd bequeath
If you could only whisper
To my sorrow laden soul,
How fast I'd see the folly
To grieve for clay beneath the knoll.
Go now beyond the mountains
Where the sun shines ever bright,
Bask in the smiles of heaven
Lend the stars thy light.
Your voice may be silenced
An your ears closed to sound,
But your virtues ever living
Can't be buried 'neath the ground.
Then I'll follow closely
Long the pathway that you trod,
I'll emulate your virtues
Then I too can meet my God.
